CCI Wireless welcomes new Chief Executive Officer

CALGARY, AB – CCI Wireless is pleased to announce the appointment of Jordan Young to the position of Chief Executive Officer.

Young has extensive experience in the telecommunications sector, most recently serving as the Senior Vice President of the Premise and Emerging Business Services with AFL, an international company specializing in fiber optic technology. He previously served as a senior leader in the AFL infrastructure services group. Prior to AFL, Young spent over a decade with TELUS in various and progressively senior leadership roles.

Young replaces Amir Bigloo, who recently departed after eight successful years at CCI Wireless.

Effective October 23rd, 2017, Young will assume his role as Chief Executive Officer of CCI Wireless. Until then, Chief Financial Officer Adam Lamont will continue to serve as Interim Chief Executive Officer, after which he will return his focus to his regular duties as CFO. Both Bigloo and Lamont will assist the transition as required.

Looking forward, CCI Wireless is confident that Young will build upon the foundation established by Bigloo, advancing the excellent platform under which the organization serves the Alberta community.

To shareholders, key partners and all community stakeholders, CCI Wireless thanks you for your patience and support during the transition process.
